GRADUATE SCHOOL

COURSE VALIDATION FORM

INSTRUCTIONS:

All work for the master's degree, including the comprehensive-final examination, must be completed within ten years. Work done earlier will not be accepted for the degree unless validated by a special examination covering the content areas of the course. The examining professor must be a member of the Graduate Faculty and have taught that particular course or similar ones. The validation form should be signed by the graduate program director of the department as well as by the examining professor(s).

Examples of a special examination are:

1. An oral exam based on a written syllabus from the course;
2. The final exam used in an equivalent course (not the same final the student took in the original course);
3. A special written exam made up solely for the purpose of validating the course;
4. Doctoral comprehensive exam.
